Baptista ► Lucentio: Welcome to our family, young Lucentio. Take good care of Bianca for me.

Lucentio ► Baptista: Don't worry, you'll be perfectly satisfied. I can give her a happy life.

Baptista ► Lucentio: But sir, have you married my daughter without my consent?

Lucentio ► Vincenzio: Thank you, father.

Vincenzio ► Lucentio: All is forgiven; I'm just glad to hear you're alive.

Lucentio ► Vincenzio: Pardon me, dear father. Bianca's love caused me to trade places with Tranio as he masqueraded around town as me.

Vincenzio ► Lucentio: How could you marry without my permission? Without even telling me?

Petruchio ► Lucentio: Thank you! She is quite a shrew, though.

Lucentio ► Petruchio: Congratulations on your marriage!

Lucentio ► Tranio: There! That's a plan!

Tranio ► Lucentio: Then it is settled. We shall switch clothes and you shall hide amongst her servants in order to woo her.

Lucentio ► Tranio: 'Tis obvious: You will be me – live in my house, instruct my servants, and do everything in my place just as I would. I, meanwhile will impersonate some other made-up fellow- some guy from Florence or Naple, or some poor guy from Pisa. Take off what you're wearing and put on my hat and cloak.

Tranio ► Lucentio: What is your plan?

Lucentio ► Tranio: Don't worry, I have it all figured out. No one has seen us yet, and no one knows what we look like – which of us is master and which is servant.

Tranio ► Lucentio: How could a person fall in love so suddenly? How are you going to woo her?

Lucentio ► Tranio: Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio, If I achieve not this young modest girl.
